

Dr. Kelly N. Greenland is the head of Keystone State Testing and also the first female owner-operated laboratory in the United States. Dr. Greenland's background is in experimental bio-physics, she has had an extensive research laboratory career having received her Doctorate from the City University of New York. She has a strong background utilizing instrumentation and techniques that are necessary in the design and implementation of the laboratory. Dr. Greenland has spent over ten years in research laboratories, experiencing all positions including: technician, mentor, investigator, and lab manager. This experience has allowed her to develop current methodologies, the Laboratory's Standard Operating Procedures, procure equipment, develop and validate applications.