

Kyle Boyar is a cannabis scientist with a background in neuroscience, microbiology, and analytical chemistry that has been working in the industry for seven years. He received his Bachelors degree in Neuroscience from the University of California Santa Cruz in 2012 and has worked extensively in cannabis testing having previously been employed as a Field Application Scientist with Medicinal Genomics and as a Laboratory Manager with SC Laboratories. Kyle currently operates his own consulting firm KB Consultations and serves as Vice Chair for the American Chemical Society's Cannabis Chemistry Subdivision as well as the Chairman for the EISOhly Award. His research interests focus on cannabis testing methodologies as well as product development and formulation.